THE Peach Convention has done much to give to Middletown that prominence among Peninsula towns to which her geographical position entitles her. With the many advantages which Middletown possesses she should hold a position second to no town on the Peninsula. The fruit district is directly at her door, her railroad facilities are as good as those of other places on the Delaware railroad, water trans portation is near at hand and within easy reach by an electric road or other means of communication, our people are industrious and thrifty and the Delaware Peninsula is as good a section of country as any upon which nature smiles

With all those advantages why should not Middletown profit by a convention of those interested in the fruit delphia: scarcely a paper has come to has not been made.

This extended advertisement of the escaped with a broken thigh. fact that an immense crop of fruit is collections and severe losses. The Camden, by lightning. basket manufacturers have been given a chance to exhibit their wares to an interested class of buyers. Nurseryval of interest in fruit-frowing, transportation companies were given a and friendly conference.

Middletown has had a chance to extend to the outside world the kind of of the world in a way which will do much to brighten her future prospects. Trade who labored so faithfully to make the convention a success, the are due; their strenuous efforts in this behalf led to success, and that success will encourage them to undertake other work of a useful kind.

THE General Passenger Agent of the Pennsylvania railroad made a written promise to the Middletown Board of Trade, to sell excursion tickets at two cents per mile from all points on the Main line and branches north of Delmar and south of Wilmington, to Middletown last Thursday. That to be present but failed to appear. The people of Delaware might suppose that there exists a common interest between themselves and the railroad to enter upon any new line of business or to develop the natural resources of a section of country of more than averbeen toward the discouragement of fruit growing by exorbitant freight charges; it has ever been charged that Peninsula truck farmers have been discriminated against in favor of Norfolk returned to Philadelphia. truck farmers. This refusal to meet with their patrons does not strengthen the position of the monopoly, and it is just such small matters as this which cause people to lose faith in the agents

Short Fruit crop in New York. Delaware truck farmers will be interested in the unfavorable reports given from 48 fruit-growing districts of the western part of New York State The apple crop is again, for the third successive year, almost a complete failure. Of 6,000 trees in one Wayne county orchard only 800 blossomed. Reports fron Lockport, Medina, Albiona, Batavia, Attica and Mount Morris all tell the same story of short crop. In the Tonawanda valley frost has destroyed the entire crop. Niagara county will not have a fifth of an average crop, because of frost and apparent exhaustion of trees. The crop of Bartlett pears will be insignificant. A fair yeild of Duchess Angoulome pears and a good crop of white cherries in some localities may be looked for. The only fruit of which a large yeild is assured is the quince, which has blossomed fully and late. Raspberries are all looking well and a full crop is certain. But altogether the crop prospect is bad and fruit farming in Western New York appears to be pretty profitless business. Times.

> have failed to make any distinction in the different circumstances of games of chance, and have involved all such games in indiscriminate censure While there is no doubt the moral evil of professional gambling, it does not follow, that in private circles, any one of the ten commandments is violated by persons of wealth hazarding small stakes occasionally to give zest to a game of chance. But when a gamester habitually plies his vocation and robs his own family, and others, by hazarding losses, they are not able o bear, it becomes a very serious evil, which cannot be too severely condemned. But it ought to be born in mind that in no case of gameing cheating to be allowed. Fair play is as indispensable here as in other matters of life, and to cheat is to steal

resorted to stealing at the game of paccarat, he placed himself at once on the level of the pickpocket and the sneak thief, and deserves to be treated as such. But, notwithstanding the palpable violation of honor, common honesty and the express commandment against stealing, this man has had his apologists, or seeming apologists, who appear to condone his flagrant offence, ecause he stole from persons of wealth or rank, who might be able to bear the losses. This must be on the communist principle that it is justifible to take or steal from those who have the means. But some who are not communists, have written, it is to be hoped inadvertently upon this topic, as for instance writer in one of the Wilmington dailies recently. This writer, in alluding to the condemnation of Gordon Cumming by the clear thinking and well disposed portion of the press, calls such censure " slush," and goes on to say that "Sir William and his bride have nothing to regret and may well snap their fingers at their former associates who affect to consider him disgraced and ostracised." And he asks what is so terrible in this fate and to whom is it terrible? What matters William and his wife have a million dollars or more, and they must be deficient in common sense if they cannot under such circumstances." This language appears indeed to be emoralizing slush. But far different is the tone of one of the leading dailies of the country a few days ago, who, in a well considered article as follows, afford to be independent of society strikes the right key : "To the sane mind unacquainted with that strange Anglo-Saxon foible the hearty, groveling love of a lord which the first of social philosophers said existed nowhere outside of the verdict and disbelieve that testimony is simply to set all the laws of evidence at defiance, to subvert justice as a rule of conduct, and abolish the means which man has set for the maintenance

- The season at Augustine Pier one of the most successful for many years. A social hop will be given this evening and a large crowd is expected to be on hand, as is usually the case on the opening night. Several will go over from Middletown.

- The business houses of the town will be closed on the Fourth, between the hours of 10 in the morning and 2 in the afternoon. Every person in the town can add much to the success of the proposed celebration by decorating their houses or places of business, with flags and bunting, and it should be done by all means. Let everybody decorate.

Stanger's float, Sons of Veterans, Major John Jones Post, No. 22, G. A. R., Elktor Council No. 22, and a line of carriages containing the speakers, the Board of Education and the Board of Trade bringing up the rear. This is by no means all those that will take part as several more will secure places before the 4th. The parade will be quite lengthy.

Immediately after the parade the ceremonies attending the presenta-tion of the flag by the Junior Order of American Mechanics to the Board of Education will be gone through with, and will prove a very interest ing part of the day's program. The staff on which the flag will be placed is on the top of the Academy building and when in position the stars and stripes will be about 100 feet from the ground. The presentation speech in pehalf of the Order will be made by Gustave Bacharach, of Philadelphia. and Hugh C. Browne of this place, will receive the flag in behalf of the Board of Education. O what an army of teachers came up before my mind as I read the words, and I did long to say a word that might help you. I often wonder if teachers really know what an influence they have over the children! I can remember to this day a dress worn by the first teacher I ever had. Nothing remains with me with such vividness as my teachers in my childhood days. I am glad for the sake of all teachers. remains with me with such vividness as my teachers in my childhood days. I am glad for the sake of all teachers that Christ was a teacher; and He had dull scholars, too, but we have Him as our example. I would say to every teacher, cultivate hopefulness. I was much toucked by an illustration I heard a minister use not long twas much outside year minister use not long ago in speaking on the subject of the Incarnation. He said it was not enough to simply tell the truth; you had to get into the heart of the one you wanted to teach. He told an had to get into the heart of the one you wanted to teach. Belfast, Ireland, to the New York Financial Chronicle: "I do not un derstand why in your article on the financial situation, 23d May, you should express surprise at the gold coming to England. The cause seems very plain. The United States government in its wisdom, by ordering the purchase of silver, has raised "Yes'm." ing the purchase of silver, has raised its price abnormally in proportion to gold. Therefore the gold comes to Europe and the silver remains with and goes to you. There is no use blaming Europe. Gold just finds its level like water, and if you interfere with the natural laws and make silver forthet the himself and the silver forthet the himself. for the time being more valuable, the gold naturally leaves your side and comes here. I do trust the United States government will soon see the folly of trying to make money plenty by purchasing silver, and even if bimetalism would be an advantage you cannot force other nations to adopt it; and unless it be made universal you are bound to lose your gold."

Now think a minute. Is there not some unknown person whom you are always meeting in this great city without any reason for it? I have asked a great many people, and find that nearly everybody is haunted by some stranger. Just at present I am haunted by a red headed girl, who has freckles and a turn up nose and wears a light gray dress. She turns up at all sorts of unexpected places. No matter where I go to lunch that red headed girl is sure to pass me on the way. Exery day or two I meet her in the "L" car. I change the line, Jüt, sure as fact there she is. If I go out between the acts at the theater that red headed girl walks by. And so it goes, until now I have got to absolutely dread her.

At Montgomery, Ala., on Tuesday, the resignation of United States Commissioner Bell was presented to Judge Bruce and accepted. But on Wednesday it was discovered that the letter of resignation was a forgery, and Mr. Bell was re-instated. Judge Bruce was indignant when he learned that a forgery had been perpetrated. Commissioner Bell said he had suspicions as to the author of the forgery and would make an investigation.

Distinguishes not between the great and the small. It exists in the mind and heart, and its object is to make life pleasanter for others. It is unselfishness, in fact. We take from the New York Herald of a recent date the following tale of the Confederate regime which finely illustrates our meaning:

One of the most pleasant mistakes which ever occured in a church is told of old St. Paul's, Richmond, Va. It is said that during the wer the sisters-in-law of Mr. Davis, President of the Confederacy, often came into church after the commencement of the service. On the Sunday referred to, before the service began an old lady plainly dressed in black, entered, and, being recognized by the sexton as Mrs. General Robert E. Lee, was shown to a seat in the President's pew. When the young ladies came down the aisle to the President's pew. When the young ladies came down the aisle to the President's pew.
